

name has been most prominent in the case, was questioned last night by District Attorney Woolwine for four hours.

"Miss Normand, I believe, has told me everything she knows about the case," said Mr. Woolwine.

"This includes nothing more to connect Sands with the case than was in evidence previously submitted to me by police detectives. I never saw a case before so devoid of workable clues."

Miss Normand, reported on the verge of a nervous breakdown yesterday, underwent her examination bravely, and to-day was again in retirement at her Hollywood home, looking very worn and pale.

A man under surveillance at Fresno was found late yesterday by J. M. Cobb, a rancher, who lives on the banks of the San Joaquin River. Cobb told the sheriff the shack in which the man was living had been built only a few days.

While herding cattle, Cobb came upon the shack, hidden in brush along the river bank, and also met the occupant. The man gave his name as Sands, according to Cobb, and answered the description of the missing Taylor valet. A number of recent daily papers were in and around the shack, he said.

When he reported the discovery to the sheriff he was shown a copy of a Los Angeles police bulletin and said the description there matched that of the man on the river bank.

Fearing any attempt to go to the shack last night would cause the man to be under guard, where he would have an excellent opportunity to get away, the sheriff decided to postpone a visit to the scene until to-day.

City officials said to-day they expected some formal action to be taken shortly.

"DOC" OWENS DEAD; KILLED BY FALL IN HAVANA HOTEL

Notorious Ship Card Sharp, Barred From Country, Brought Here for Burial.

W. J. Owens, known wherever big gamblers gathered as "Doc," was killed by a fall down a stairway in the Hotel Almendares in Havana, Jan. 14, and his body was brought to New York and buried, according to information to-day from Havana. There had been rumors along Broadway for several days of his death. Investigation by the American Consul General proved Owens' death an accident.

"Doc" Owens was one of a notorious group of card sharps and gamblers who prospered in the early years of the century. He was barred from ships of big transatlantic lines in 1904 after it had been reported he had won $200,000 from William Thaw of Pittsburgh, though both denied the story.

"He went to England, and when he tried to return he was barred by the State Department."

He then supplied the capital for a London dressmaking establishment. He had been in Havana two years trying to get back to the United States, where he had been naturalized. His attorneys say he left a substantial estate in London and considerable property in Havana.

AUTO KILLS BOY; WOMAN IS STRUCK

Chauffeur of First Machine Speeds Off After Accident in Williamsburg.

Samuel Middelman, seventeen years old, of No. 745 Driggs Avenue, Williamsburg, was struck early to-day in front of No. 681 Broadway, Williamsburg, by an automobile that did not stop.

He died a few hours later in St. Catherine's Hospital. The police have the license number of the car.

Mrs. Adele McKenna, twenty-eight years old, of No. 8 Oak Street, Jersey City, was on her way home from a party at 1 A. M. to-day when she walked into an automobile driven by Lester Kelley, No. 454 Ocean Avenue. Her dress caught on a mudguard and she was dragged twenty feet. It is said the driver of the City Hospital she probably will die.

According to the police, she said she became confused as the automobile approached.

VANDERBILT WREATH FOR MAN GOING TO CHILE

Merry Was Makes Presentation Before Ship Departs.

Before the Elbro of the Royal Mail Lines sailed for the West Coast of South America to-day, a young man came aboard bearing a funeral wreath. He brought out Walter P. Jacob of West 13th Street and handed it to him. Mr. Jacob is going to Chile for the Braden Copper Company and will be gone for three years.

Miss Muriel Vanderbilt, daughter of W. K. Vanderbilt, was the donor. The wreath, with large mourning streamers, bore the inscription on a card:

"To our beloved Bud, who departed this life Feb. 11, 1922-1925."

100,000 DE FRAUDULED BY BUCKET SHOPS THAT CLOSED DOORS

Dier Concern Alone Had 3,000 on Books, District Attorneys Find.

40 VICTIMS EXAMINED. Evidence Will Be Submitted to the Grand Jury Next Tuesday.

Assistant District Attorneys Schreiber and Simmons interrogated to-day forty persons who alleged they were defrauded by bucket shops that closed doors. The Dier & Co. concern had 3,000 "customers" on its books when it was under—That is, on the books the District Attorney has been able to find.

Victims were generally persons of moderate means who had saved up a few thousand dollars and dreamed of quick and large returns. One of the women questioned by Mr. Simmons to-day is a widow with two little children. She invested life insurance, paid her after her husband's death, in a policy which was a regular but small dividend. This investment was made on the advice of a lawyer.

In time she was approached by a solicitor for a Wall Street bucket shop. He told her she was foolish to be struggling along on the little old 4 per cent. interest. He promised her at least 50 per cent. She turned her securities over to the solicitor. The bucket shop sold them. She never got a penny of return.

"When I realized that I had been robbed," she told Mr. Simmons, "I went home determined to kill my babies and myself. I made complete preparations, but something held me back."

A policeman who had $3,500 invested in dividend-paying bonds was induced to turn them over to a bucket shop solicitor. He discovered later that the bonds were sold for $2,750 within 15 minutes after they reached the bucket shop. He has been unable to recover any of his money.

The records of one concern composed of three youths, which lasted for six months, shows that it was started on $1,900, which one of them wheeled from a janitress.

A man from out of town told the District Attorney he lost $19,000 in eight months. He thought he was covering margins on stock transactions. The books of the bucket shop show that the "brokers" put his money in their pockets.

One of the practices of the swindlers was to send victims "dividends." The "dividends" were supposed to be returned from stocks which victims had been purchased for their account.

"We are sending you the cash instead of the coupons," a letter accompanying the check would state, "to save ourselves bookkeeping."

At the close of to-day's session the District Attorney's office had forty cases ready for presentation to the Grand Jury.

SEE HAYS'S INFLUENCE IN THEATRE TAX PLAN

Movies Can Evade Bonus Imposed by Cutting Admission One Cent.

(Special From a Staff Correspondent of the Evening World.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—Will Hays was not in Washington when the new taxation schedule designed to raise money for the bonus was adopted by the House Committee, but there are telephone lines between Washington and Miami and, perhaps, there is also a radio-telepathy communication as exists between Mayor Hylan and his Commissioner of Accounts, Mr. Hirschfeld.

Here is the point. Will Hays on March 1 will assume control of the motion picture industry in so far as it is represented by the big producers who employed him. These producers sell films to every moving picture theatre in the United States.

When the plan to tax theatre tickets was first considered by the House Committee, one of the rural statesmen made the declaration that "anybody who can afford to pay 10 cents for a theatre ticket can afford to pay a tax."

That was about a week ago.

But when the bill came out of committee, it provided for a tax on tickets selling for 25 cents or more.

The same majority of the moving picture theatre of the United States and Canada operate on admission charges of 25 cents and under. The proposed law relieves all these theatres from taxation because the 25-cent tickets can evade it by lowering the admission fee to 24 cents.

If, as is said, the movie people employed Will Hays because they thought he could help them in politics, perhaps they consider he has already earned his salary for the present year.

MANY AMERICANS FAIL TO GET CARDS TO PAPAL CROWNING

Tickets From Vatican Are Stolen From the Mails and Offered for Sale.

(The New York Evening World, by Press Publishing Co., 1922.)

ROME, Feb. 11.—Vatican officials have been astounded to learn that a large proportion of the 25,000 tickets mailed for to-morrow's coronation of the Pope have been intercepted by thieves and are now being hawked around hotels by janitors and porters, prices ranging from 100 lire ($20 normally) to 1,000 lire ($200 normally).

The sealed official Vatican envelopes received by correspondents, embassies and visitors have been either empty or contained blank paper.

A large number of Americans have applied to the American College for tickets, but only a few have been allotted to that quarter, and no assurance is offered that additional ones can be secured. Cardinal O'Connell of Boston has promised to do his best so that Americans will be able to get a glimpse of the proceedings.

Two American Catholic students who waited in a long line at the Major-domo's office for ninety minutes were forced to return empty-handed, because when their turn came the offices were closed.

The Pope's brother, Fermo, with his wife, son and daughter and also the Pope's only sister, Camella, have arrived in Rome from Milan to visit him. The Italian Government had the royal waiting room opened for their use. This is the first time such a courtesy has been shown to any of the Pope's family.

The Pope's family is received in Rome with sovereign honors, which is an exaggeration of the Government's civility.

At the Vatican's bronze doors the relatives were stopped by a Swiss Guard, who asked: "Are you sure you're the Pope's relatives?" and did not let the little group pass till his superior officer came up and gave orders to that effect.

ALL READY TO CROWN PIUS XI. TO-MORROW

Thirty-Five Thousand Tickets Sent Out for Coronation Ceremonies.

ROME, Feb. 11.—Preparations for the coronation of Pope Pius XI, which takes place to-morrow morning at 8.30 o'clock, were completed to-day.

The Pope's brother, Fermo, with his wife, son and daughter and also the Pope's only sister, Camella, have arrived in Rome from Milan to visit him. The Italian Government had the royal waiting room opened for their use. This is the first time such a courtesy has been shown to any of the Pope's family.

A tiara, adorned with three crowns, will be placed on the Pope's head by the Second Cardinal Deacon.

covered. Most of the defects so far found are minor ones. Kleiner added that many of the violations have already been remedied, and the owners in nearly every case offered their cooperation and willingness to correct defects, most of which existed without their knowledge.

There are 287 theatres in the borough. As the corrections required are made, Mr. Kleiner said, they will be announced, so no undue alarm or loss of patronage is expected to occur as a result of minor defects in the structures. Where owners persist in violating the building or fire laws, however, he said, their places will be closed.

The three places which were ordered closed yesterday after the inspection of the 181 theatres already completed, were the Den Theatre at No. 207 Atlantic Avenue, described by the inspectors as "a very bad fire hazard"; the Bevilacqua Theatre at No. 144 High Street; and the Subway Theatre at No. 158 Myrtle Avenue, which was declared to be "unfit for public use."

The inspectors said that the Bevilacqua Theatre was "in generally bad condition, heated by gas stoves on stage."

The corrections to be made in the other places are for the most part of minor matters such as cracked cement ceilings, cracked walls, unsanitary toilets, waste material between ceiling and hanging ceiling, auditorium floor beams cut away, causing deflection of floor, and other similar defects.

Borough President Miller to-day said that of the 318 theatres in Manhattan 288 of them had been examined and not one structure violation had been reported. The other thirty probably will be examined next week. In the inspection of public buildings a small dance hall at Lexington Avenue and 125th Street was found to be unsafe and was closed. The inspector is making the changes necessary to provide the margin of safety in situated upon.

MISS NORMAND'S STORY OF HER LAST VISIT TO HOME OF TAYLOR

Gazette in the car, which he noticed. He chided me for having it, remarking that Freud, Haackel and Nietzsche were hardly compatible with such literature. After an exchange of repartee for a few minutes I bade him good night and directed my chauffeur to drive me home.

Before I left, Mr. Taylor promised to phone me at my home within an hour. He never did.

As William (my chauffeur) pulled away from the curb I looked back and saw Mr. Taylor standing there, gazing after me. I waved my hand. That was the last time I ever saw Mr. Taylor alive.

Within a few minutes I was at my home. I immediately retired, having dinner served to me in bed about 8.15 o'clock.

The first knowledge I had of Mr. Taylor's death was when Edna Purviance phoned me the following morning about 7.30.

She told me that Mr. Taylor's valet had been seen rushing from Mr. Taylor's home, screaming that his master was dead. I have no idea who killed Mr. Taylor, or what was the reason for his death.

I would only be too proud to announce the fact had I been engaged to Mr. Taylor, but such a statement would be an absolute untruth.

I held Mr. Taylor in the highest esteem, regarding him as a very learned, cultured gentleman, with whom any woman might be proud to associate. Mr. Taylor and I had much in common, and during the long period of our friendship, he aided me materially in my study of the French language and philosophy, in which I had been interested for some time. I am also interested in these things now.

So far as revealing the contents of any letters written by Mr. Taylor to me or by me to Mr. Taylor is concerned, I have no reason to fear any consequences which might result from such disclosures, except the natural embarrassment of having personal correspondence revealed to the public gaze.

ROUMANIAN NAVY LOST ON ITS FIRST VOYAGE

Two Torpedo Boats Allotted to Peace Settlement Go Aground.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 11.—Two former Austrian torpedo boats allotted to Roumania in the peace settlement, and named the Furcular and Nauka, ran aground yesterday at the entrance to the Bosphorus, three miles off Cape Isakaya, on their maiden voyage to Greece.

The crew of the Furcular was saved but it is thought the men on the other vessel were lost.

when we shall have grand opera for ten cents."

As to economic conditions: "Things are getting better. I have kept a chart of every period of financial depression since I went into business. There have been five of these charts. By study of them, I am convinced that this one is nearly over."

As to wages and labor: "I have reduced my working force from 8,000 to 4,000 since the beginning of 1920. The readjustment of wages is not satisfactory yet. Some workers get too much. Some get too little. Many unskilled laborers are underpaid."

As to the success of his questionnaires as a test of the fitness of employees: "I got about sixty men of the kind I wanted. They were all college men. We examined 1,300 men in all. It was not a high percentage."

Mr. Edison, meeting his interviewers in the library, asked them to "hold up" until he made himself comfortable. This he proceeded to do by cutting a generous slice of plug of tobacco and stowing it in his cheek.

The posing for pictures outside took more of his time than he apparently realized, for he looked at his watch and started at a week that was almost a trot for the laboratory.

"I know I'm late, Pop," he said to Pop Brady, his messenger and helper, who has been with him for thirty-three years. "I know I'm nineteen minutes late. Hunt don't wait for me. I'm awfully sorry but I couldn't help it." He lit a corn cob pipe and went in.

And that was the last the reporters and photographers heard or saw of him on his birthday.

The employees of the plant waited upon Mr. Edison and paid their respects in the morning. The statement presented him with a statue sculptured by Loreda Taft. He put on a phonograph record and listened to messages dictated by Lord Admiral Jellicoe, Premier Hughes of Australia and friends in the dramatic profession.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—President Harding sent the following letter to-day to Thomas A. Edison on the occasion of the inventor's seventy-fifth birthday.

"My Dear Mr. Edison: Senator Frelinghuysen has reminded me of the fact that you are to celebrate your seventy-fifth birthday anniversary on Feb. 11, and I am taking this occasion to send you my congratulations and very best wishes. I hope you will have many more years of happy service to the world at large, such as you have so generously given in the past.

Very sincerely,

"WARREN G. HARDING."

ARMED MEN HALT LORRY FILLED WITH POLICE NEAR CORK

Queen Street area of Belfast this morning. Police reinforcements were sent to the scene.

DUBLIN, Feb. 11 (United Press).—The meeting of the Dail Eireann scheduled for Tuesday has been postponed until Feb. 28 on account of the situation.

Four counties are paralyzed by a rail strike, and feeling runs high as a result of armed clashes along the Tyrone border. The Provisional Government was to-day expected to take drastic measures to end the temporary rule of strikers who seized the railroad administration at Cork, cutting off from food and communication by rail all towns along 200 miles of track.

The strikers planned to run trains themselves to-day.

Postponement of the Dail meeting, at which De Valera and his followers are expected to resume their fight against the treaty and the Free State, has materially strengthened the hands of the radicals.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—Senator William S. Kenyon of Iowa is legally eligible to sit on the bench of the United States Circuit Court, Attorney General Daugherty holds in an opinion transmitted to President Harding and made public to-day.

Mr. Daugherty's opinion was given in response to the President's request. The Attorney General finally declares that such has been the intent of the framers of the Constitution would have used the words "during the term of service" instead of "the time for which he was elected."

DEATH OF 'BEANSY' RECALLS TALES OF OLD-TIME GAMBLER

Sigmund Rosenfeld Died From Pneumonia, Still Under Indictment.

Sigmund Rosenfeld, old-time gambler, better known on the east side and along Broadway as "Beansy," died Friday in a sanitarium in West 77th Street of pneumonia following an attack of influenza. He was forty-nine years old.

Rosenfeld is understood to have gained the name of "Beansy" from his family name, "Bian" or "Biehan." He was under bail at the time of his death on an indictment charging him with wholesale dealing in fraudulent liquor permits, in conspiracy with Edward Donegan and two women, former clerks in the office of Prohibition Director O'Connor. He had been convicted in New Jersey of conducting a chain of gambling houses in Bergen County.

Miss Anna Carpenter, who has been engaged to marry him for four years, and her nephew, Benjamin Guttman, were with him when he died.

Rosenfeld has been living at John Gianelli's, No. 104 East 17th Street. He was taken to the sanitarium Tuesday when it became apparent he had pneumonia. His funeral will be held from Meyer's funeral rooms, No. 228 Lenox Avenue at 2 o'clock to-morrow afternoon.

Rosenfeld was forty-nine years old. He is understood to have gained the name of "Beansy" from his original name, Simon Bihan.

He was under bail at the time of his death on a United States indictment charging him with wholesale dealing in fraudulent liquor permits, in conspiracy with Edward Donegan and two women, former clerks in the office of Prohibition Director O'Connor. He had been convicted in New Jersey of conducting a chain of gambling houses in Bergen County.

For this he was fined $1,000 and sentenced to jail. He was pardoned last December by Gov. Edwards.

Short, rotund, baldheaded, suave and imperturbable, Rosenfeld was typical of the school of gamblers which grew to wealth and maturity on Second Avenue and then invaded richer if more difficult hunting grounds for the money of the uptown venturesome and foolish.

Rosenfeld had a gambling house in West 14th Street for years. He called it the "Merchants' Club."

Rosenfeld led all his kind in ingenuity in combating the law. He was the first to protect his entrances with "ice box doors."

When the east side gamblers began the quarrels which culminated in the Rosenthal murder, bombs were exploded in front of a place he had in 15th Street and another in 44th Street.

His Carlistad, N. J., establishment was so formidable the sheriff obtained the services of a company of militia in trench helmets to capture it.

SYRACUSE, Feb. 11.—A student who will smoke cigarettes in any buildings of Syracuse University "has no hopeful moral sense" according to Chancellor James R. Day, who again scolds about smoking in a letter published in the student paper to-day.

Chancellor Day explains that the order, which carries the threat of expulsion, is not his but the trustees although if they had not promulgated such an order he would have done so himself. Smoking on the campus, as well as in the buildings, is prohibited, he says.

MORNING 352,852 SUNDAY 609,290 EVENING 300,740

State and national banks of New York must pay the 1 per cent. tax assessed on the valuation of their shares of stock by the Board of Taxes and Assessments of New York City. This decision was given to-day by Justice Vernon M. Davis in a test case to review the action of the Tax Board brought by the Hanover National Bank. Legal representatives of the cities of Ontario, Rochester and Syracuse appeared in the proceeding and filed briefs.

The assessable valuation of the stock in New York banks amounts to several hundred millions of dollars and the tax itself reaches millions. In the case of the Hanover Bank alone each of the 30,000 shares is valued at $10.51, the assessment aggregating $24,315,361.86.

When the tax first was levied the banks brought suit claiming discrimination against their institutions and a violation of the Revised Statutes of the United States. The banks hoped to have a decision made by Dec. 31, but when this was not done they paid the tax in preference to the penalty of $100 a day for each day the tax was not paid.
